BROKEN ARROW - The city has been recognized as one of the country's best places to retire by a national magazine.

Money Magazine named Broken Arrow to its "25 Best Places to Retire" after profiling cities around the country based on cost of living, recreational activities and quality of healthcare, a news release stated.

Broken Arrow made the list for offering the "ease of suburban living with close proximity to metropolitan offerings like museums, shopping and dining ... and home prices that start in the low $100,000s."

The magazine also mentioned the city's new Broken Arrow Historical Museum, which opened earlier this year, and the school district's new performing arts center, which will host its inaugural concert this month.

"We are thrilled about the recognition," Broken Arrow Mayor Mike Lester said. "We know what a wonderful community we live in but it's nice to see the nation taking notice."

Other cities making the Money list include Palm Springs, Calif.; Savannah, Ga.; Bella Vista, Ark.; and Chattanooga, Tenn.

Broken Arrow has earned other magazine honors recently: Last year, Family Circle magazine named the city one of its Top 10 Towns for Families for 2008.
